Ann Myrna

Ann Myrna is an actor and film producer in Chicago working in TV, film, commercials, industrial and web projects, as well as theater. She is also a voice over actor. She began acting in high school, spent most of her career in Information Technology, and has returned to acting to get more creativity back into her life. She'd love to hear more about your next project and is willing to travel!

There are quite different challenges when approaching a film project as an actor versus a producer. The actor needs to prepare their own character and role, but the producer needs to prepare for everyone's needs. The producer finds the funding, may have some casting input, creates the shooting schedule, gathers props, organizes food and lodging, scouts shooting locations, recruits background extra actors, handles paperwork, and solves problems as they arise. Ann has done a lot of work in the horror genre, those projects also involve special effects makeup and unique costumes and props.

Ann always looks for a great story first when considering a project as an actor or producer. Everything in the script must support the story. She considers all projects that come her way, but only accepts the projects that she really wants to work on. She loves being part of a team that brings a story to life.

Some of Ann's favorite characters are those who are "disturbed" in some fashion: a cult member, a mother who is tired of serving everyone else's needs, a person who believes their intentions are good but is manipulative, a zombie, a murderous supernatural entity. And she'll also play nice people.
