My name is Ashlyn kendell and I am a 12 year old female that is a yellow and black belt in BJJ.

I have been doing jiu jitsu for around 3 years. I got into jiu jitsu because of my dad and my brother.

I do jiu jitsu because I truly have a passion for this martial art, like no other!

My dream is to compete in a big kids tournament something like " Pan kids" . I just do local tournament but I am travelling for a few this year that are in Canada. Another dream I have is to become a black belt. I really hope I stick to this sport and achieve my dreams.

Some goals I have this year is to get to as much tournaments as I can, I really love competing!

Some challenges I have faced were fighting people with advantages. I have fought higher belts, heavier and older people and most of the time I come out as the winner.

Jiu jitsu has show me the value of discipline and how hard you have to work to come out as champion!

Thanks for your time

"A Triumph of Determination: Navigating ADHD and Autism on the Brazilian Jiu-Jitsu Mats"

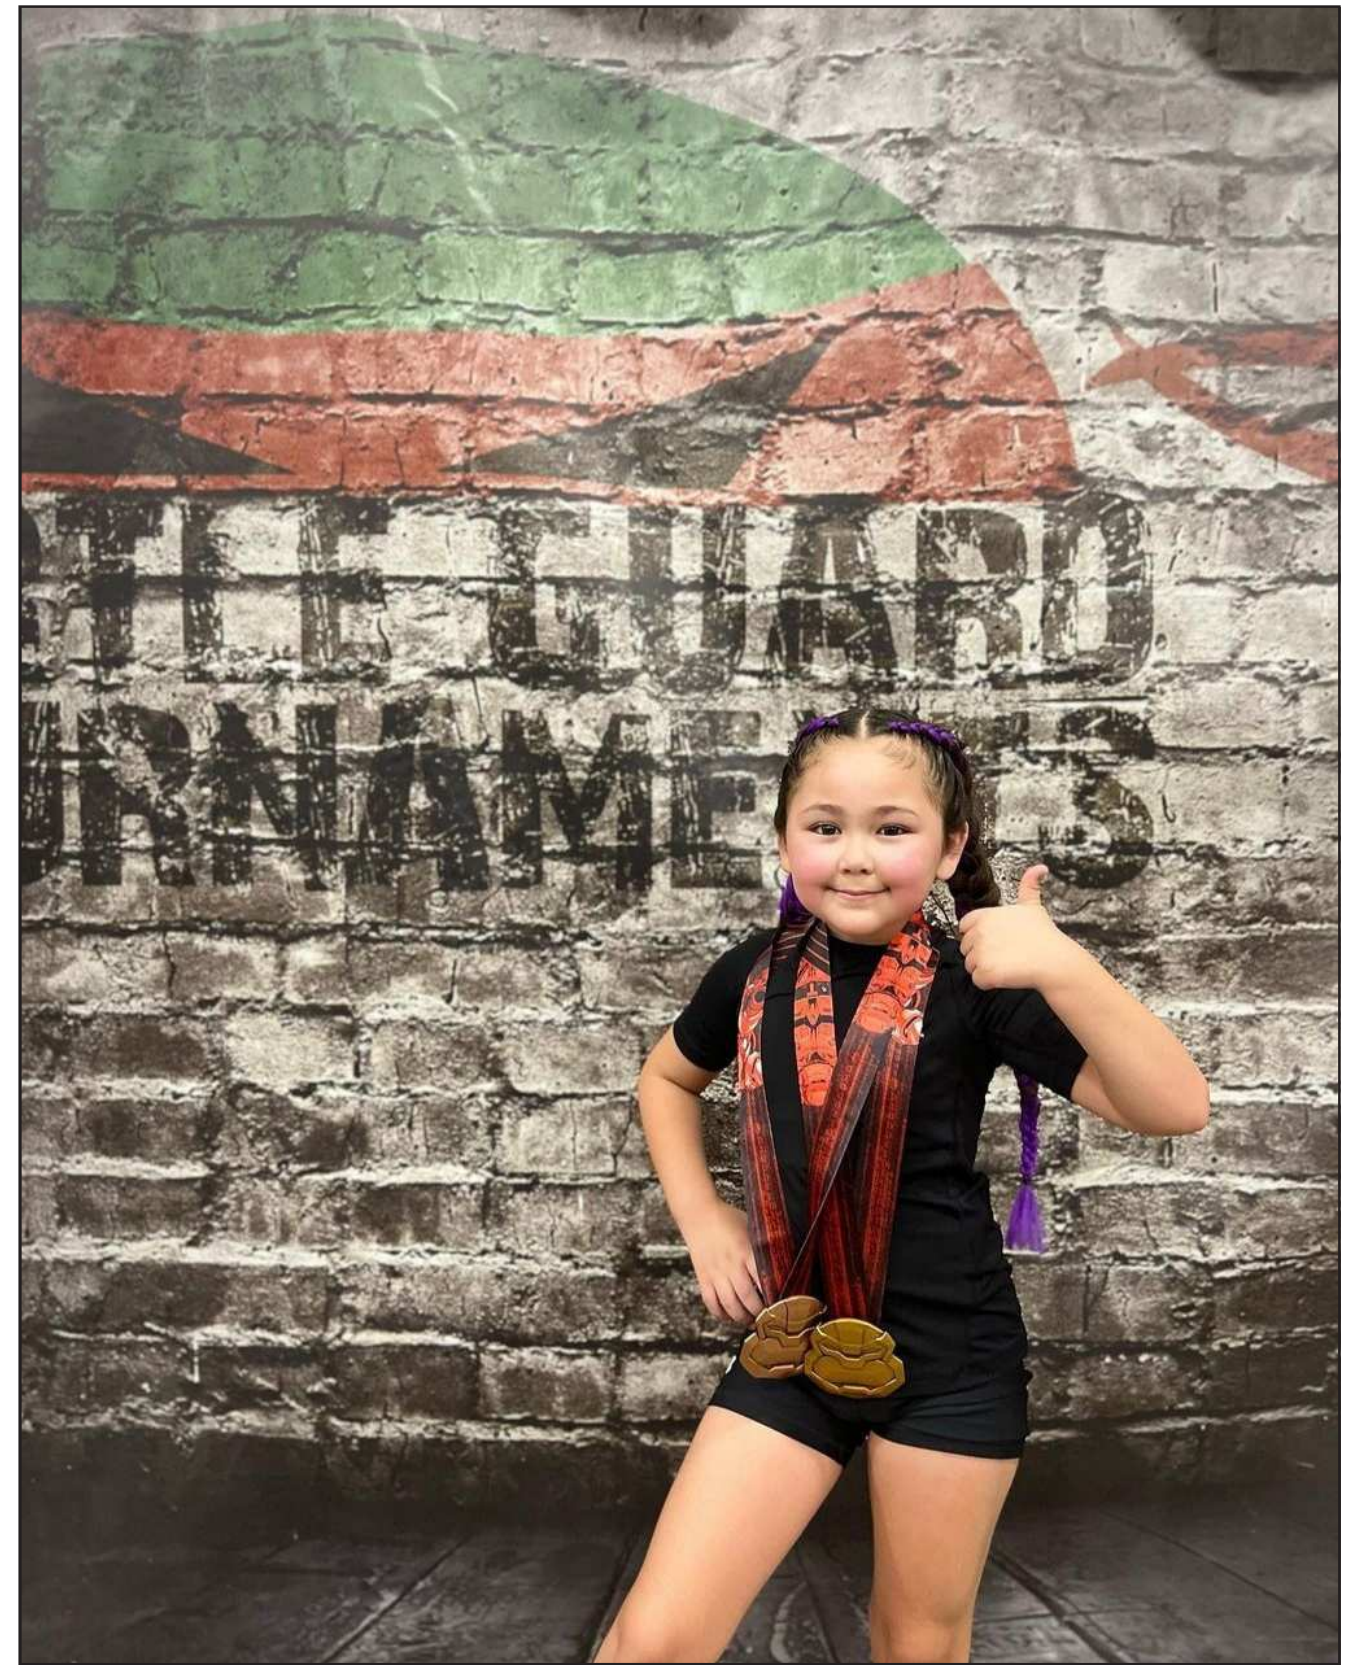

In the vibrant city of Southampton, a young warrior is quietly pursuing his dreams within the world of Brazilian Jiu-Jitsu (BJJ). Meet Clay, a nine-year-old dynamo with aspirations of becoming a UFC fighter, embarking on a remarkable journey despite facing the challenges of ADHD and Autism.

At the age of six, Clay took his first steps onto the mats at Phoenix MMA, a hub for aspiring martial artists. Little did he know that this would be the start of a transformative journey that would not only shape his physical prowess but also become a testament to his resilience.

Living with ADHD and Autism has presented unique hurdles for Clay, but his love for BJJ has proven to be an anchor, providing structure and focus in his life. The discipline and routine inherent in martial arts have become invaluable tools in managing the daily challenges that come with neurodiversity.

Starting as a novice in Brazilian Jiu-Jitsu, Clay quickly rose through the ranks, earning his grey white belt. His progression speaks volumes about his dedication and the unwavering support from the instructors and peers at Phoenix MMA. The gym has become more than just a training ground; it's a community that fosters growth, understanding, and encouragement.

Competing in BJJ tournaments became a natural extension of Clay's journey. Against formidable opponents, he showcased not only his technical skills but also an indomitable spirit. Winning gold and silver medals in various competitions became milestones, not just for his athletic achievements but also for triumphs over personal challenges.

The support system at Phoenix MMA has played a pivotal role in Clay's journey. Instructors have adapted teaching methods to accommodate his unique learning style, creating an inclusive environment where every child, regardless of neurodiversity, can thrive.

For Clay, the dream of becoming a UFC fighter is more than just a desire for physical excellence. It's a testament to the power of resilience, breaking stereotypes, and proving that one's potential is limitless, regardless of neurodiversity.

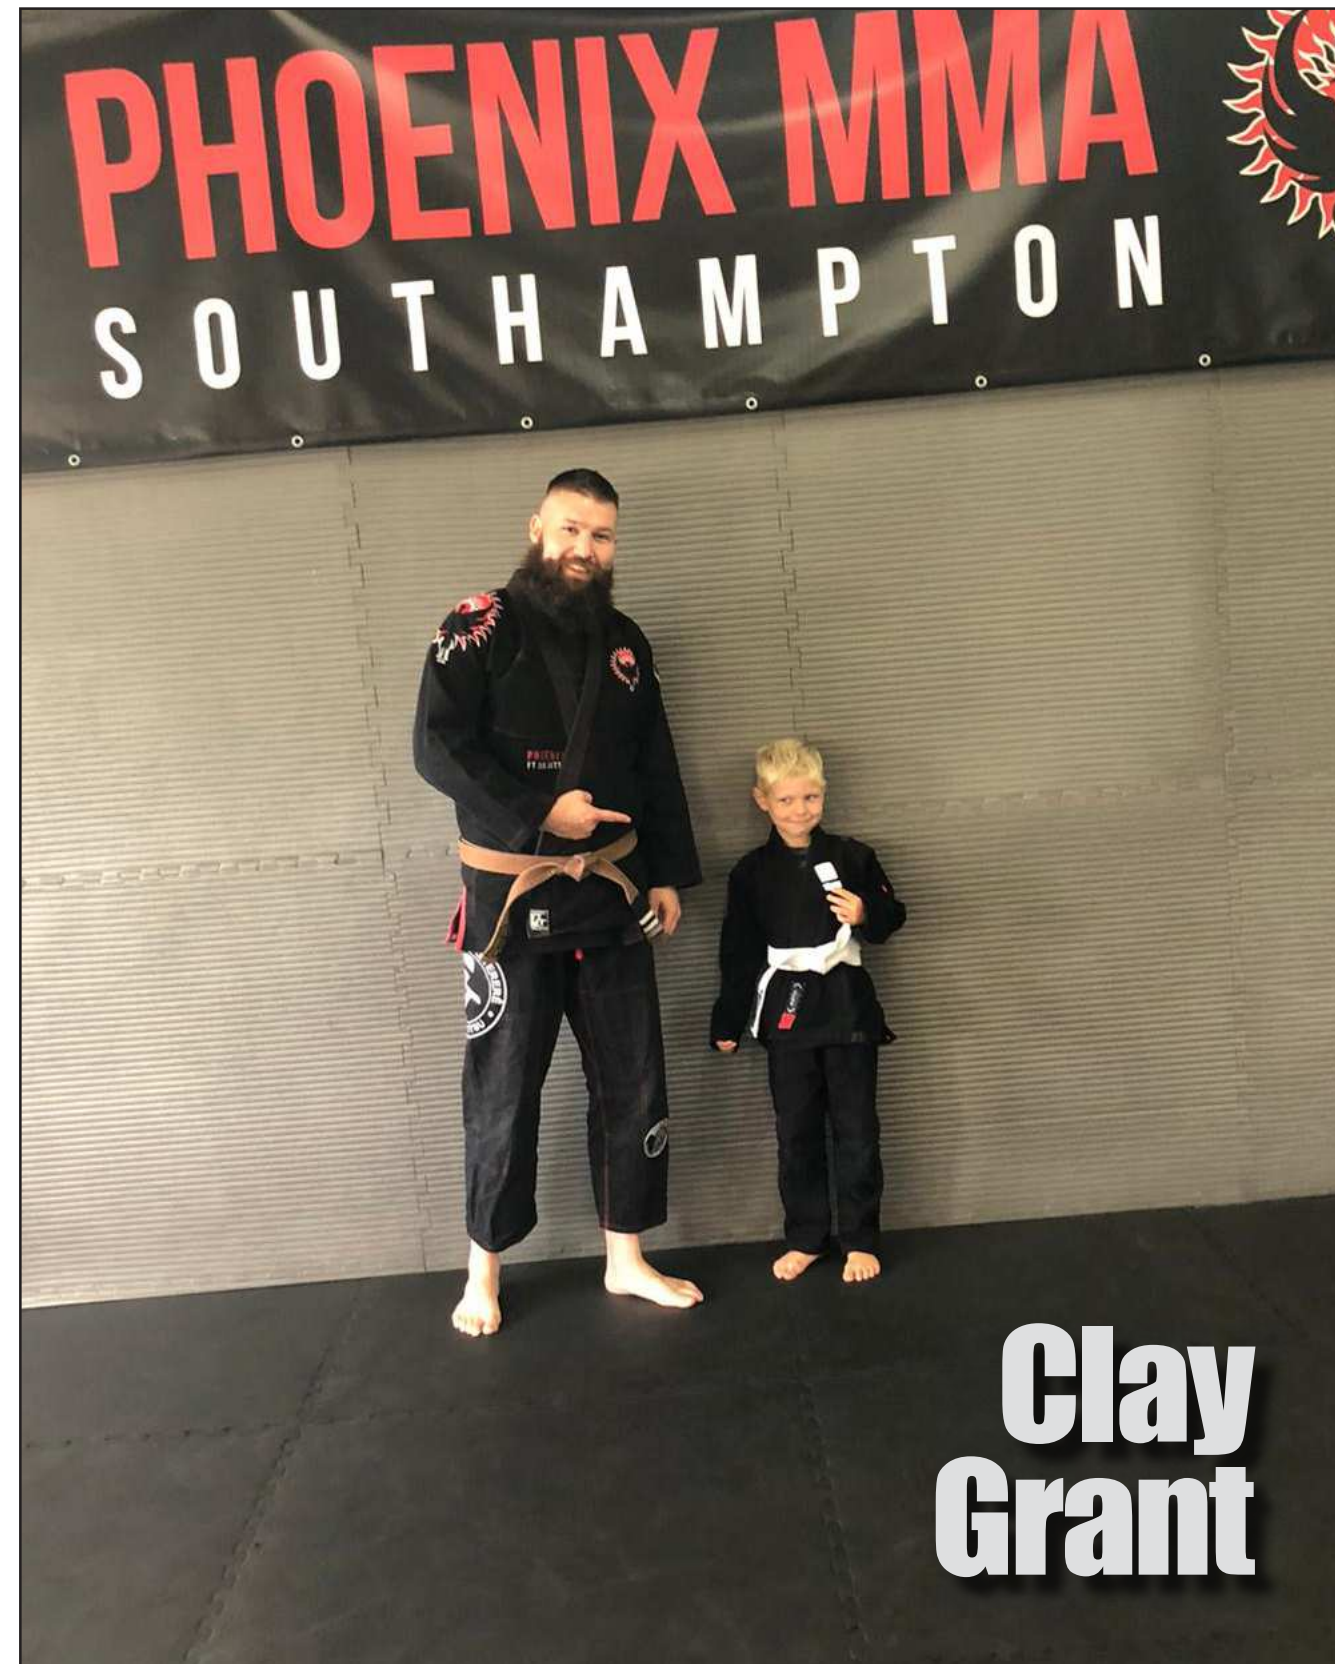

As Clay continues his journey, he not only inspires his fellow young martial artists but also challenges societal perceptions about what individuals with ADHD and Autism can achieve. Through the art of Brazilian Jiu-Jitsu, he is crafting a narrative of determination, tenacity, and triumph that extends beyond the mats and into the realm of endless possibilities.
